A New magazine

For the modern Women of Kabul

Not a bikini in sight

THE Women of Afghanistan now have their own magazine backed by Elle, a stylish French publication. But the more conservative forces in the country need not worry, at least not yet. The 36- page monthly does not feature the latest bikini collection or tips on liposuction. The magazine, called Rox (the Day) is printed in black and white, the best that Afghan technology can provide at the moment. The articles, in Pirshtu and Dari – the main Afghan idioms – with some translated into French and English, offer advice on daily life, health, hair and skin care, and parenting. There is some poetry and fiction, and the unavoidable horoscope.

Reading comprehension Exercises

Following the fall of the Taliban, a group of Afghan women led by Lairorna Ahmadi, a former radio journalist, planned the magazine, but had no money. Over the years Elle has run many articles o Afghan women. Now it and its parent company, Hachette Filipacchi, have provided Miss Ahmadi and her team with publishing equipment and the money to get things moving. She has a staff of four and some freelance contributions. The first issue of 1,500 copies, published this month, was free. Future ones will cost the equivalent of 20 cents. The market at present is small. Afghans are poor: 20 cents buys two loaves of bread. Eight Afghan women out of ten cannot read. But, says Miss Ahmadi, at least the two who can now have something written for them.
